- The Families First Coronavirus Response Act applies only to private businesses that have fewer than 500 employees and to government agencies of all sizes.
- An employee who needs leave for childcare because schools are closed or childcare providers are unavailable because of the coronavirus are eligible for 2 weeks of emergency paid sick time. During the time off, employers must pay the employee two-thirds (2/3) of their regular rate of pay or two-thirds (2/3) of the minimum wage that applies where they work, whichever is more. Employers are not required to pay more than $200 per day or $2,000 total. Employers may not require an employee to use sick days, vacation time, or other paid time off before taking two weeks of emergency paid sick time, or while taking the emergency paid sick time. If the employer agrees, the employee may choose to use vacation, sick, or other paid time off to supplement the 2/3 pay, to receive full pay.
- An employee who has been employed for 30 days or longer also is eligible to receive 12 weeks of emergency paid leave for childcare. The first 10 workdays of this leave do not have to be paid, but the employee can receive pay for the first 10 workdays by using their 2 weeks of emergency paid sick time (see above) or any vacation, sick time, or personal days they already have. After the first 10 workdays, employers must pay the employee two-thirds (2/3) of their regular rate of pay, based on the number of hours they normally work. Employers do not have to pay an employee more than $200 per day or $10,000 total of emergency paid leave ($12,000, if including the 2 weeks of paid sick time, above). Employers can require employees to use any paid time off that is available for this purpose under the employer's policy (for example, personal leave, but typically not medical leave) and receive full pay. Or, if the employer agrees, the employee may choose to use vacation, sick, or other paid time off to supplement the 2/3 pay, to receive full pay.
- Emergency employer-paid leave and sick time is not available to all employees:
 - Employers may provide paid leave to healthcare providers and emergency responders, but they are not required to do so.
 - An employee is not eligible for paid leave if their employer does not have work for them to do during the time they need the leave (e.g., if their worksite is closed or they are furloughed).
 - Most federal employees will not be eligible for the 12 weeks of emergency leave, but will be eligible for the 2 weeks of sick time.
 - In rare circumstances, a business with fewer than 50 employees is not required to provide paid leave when doing so would cause the business to have to stop operating.
- If an employer and employee agree, then an employee may take part-time ("intermittent") leave.
- Employers receive tax credits to cover costs associated with providing paid leave. Visit: <https://www.irs.gov/newsroom/covid-19-related-tax-credits-for-required-paid-leave-provided-by-small-and-midsize-businesses-faqs>.

- Employees who are not eligible or use up their paid leave under the Families First Coronavirus Response Act may be eligible for job-protected leave under the Family and Medical Leave Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act, and/or other federal, state, and local laws. They may also be eligible to collect unemployment insurance, pandemic unemployment assistance, paid family leave, or other benefits from the state where they work.
